ROOSEYELT ON COLLEGE TOUR.

AND HOLY CROSS.

Will Get Degree at Williams To-day-In His Speeches He Emphasized the Need of Ideals and Preached the Gospel of Peace-Greeting to Harvard Crew.

WILLIAMSTOWN, Mass., June 21 .- President Roosevelt attended the commencement exercises at Clark University, Worcester, to-day and talked to the students on ideals of life, individual and national. Then he made an address at Holy Cross College and in the afternoon came here to he present at the Williams commencement | who again has done work for the public, exercises to-morrow and receive the degree of doctor of letters.

The President is a guest at the house of President Hopkins, where he dined to-night with ex-Secretary of War Elihu Root, ex-Ambassador Joseph H. Choate, Winthrop Murray Crane, Morris K. Jesup and other distinguished persons as his follow guests.

Upon the arrival of the President's special train at Jersey City, at 3 o'clock this morning, the cars were transferred by steamer to the tracks of the New Haven road at Harlem River. The train arrived at New London about 7 o'clock and was then switched to the Norwich and Worcester road, on the cast bank of the Thames.

The President was dressing as the train passed Red Top, the training quarters of the Harvard crew. Word had been sent to him by one of the railroad officers that the Harvard boys were hoping the President would step out on the platform and wave his hand by way of "good luck" to the crew. Mr. Roosevelt had not finished dressing, however, and he was much disappointed at not having been notified earlier. The members of the crew were cutside their clubhouse and waved to the train as it passed. A minute or so later the train passed Gales Ferry, the quarters of the rival Yale crew, and the collegians gave the President a rousing cheer.

GOOD LUCK TO HARVARD CREW. Mr. Roosevelt sent telegrams to each crew from the next stopping place. Following are the telegrams:

ing the greetings of Gov. Douglas, and Mayor Walter H. Blodgett in behalf of the city of Worcester welcomed the President. Stephen Salisbury, president of the trustees of Clark University and Clark College, was also in the party.

It is many years since Worcester has spread herself as she did for the reception of the President. Although he was hardly more than half a day in the city, thousands of dollars were spent by business firms and individuals in decorating the exterior of Washington Square, along Front and Main streets to Clark University the structures were swathed in bunting.

roar of cheers. A passage to the street was quickly made, the President bowing constantly to the acclaim of the crowds. In spite of the rain, the President rode in an open carriage. The cheering multitude gave bim no opportunity to sit. All the way to Clark College, a distance of about two miles, the demonstration continued.

The occasion of the President's visit was the graduation of the first class in the collegiate department of Clark University, of which Carroll D. Wright, formerly Commissioner of Labor and a member of Mr. Roosevelt's coal strike board of arbitration, is president. The late Schator Hoar of Massachusetts was one of the trustees of the university, and he secured the promise of Mr. Roosevelt two years ago to attend the graduation of the first class.

THE PRESIDENT ON IDEALS.

The orator of the day at this morning's commencement exercises was Dr. Hamilton Wright Mabie of New York, who spoke on "The Trained Man." His address was to distinctly in the vein of President Roosevelt's speeches that Mr. Roosevelt, who followed him, said that Dr. Mabie had said everything that he had expected to say. and that all he could do would be to illustrate the orator's statements. After eulogizing the late Senator Hoar and Carroll D. Wright, the President spoke to the graduating class on some ideals of life. He said in part.

The first duty of each one of you here is to carry your own weight, to carry yourselves; you aren't going to be able to do anything for any one else until you can dependent upon you. I do not want to see you develop that kind of idealism which makes you filled with vague thoughts of beneficence for mankind and an awful drawback to your immediate families.

While I think we live in a pretty good world. I do not think it is the best possible world, and I hope we shall have a readjustment of rewards, even those of a pecuniary or material kind. Altogether too much in the way of rewards comes to a certain type of financier and too little comes to the student, to the scholar, to the teacher, to the man who represents the scholarly side, the side of thought, thought making, thought producing work in our nation. "I want to say that as a preliminary and to have it understood that I never would have you lose sight of your fundamental duty at the outset, but while remembering that remember also that it is not figuratively but literally true that the really first class work can't be paid for, cannot be done by the man who expects pay for it. GREATEST DOER A GREAT DREAMER. "I have always felt most strongly that it is true of the nation as of the individual that the greatest doer must also be a great dreamer. Of course, if the dream isn't followed by action then it is a bubble. It merely has served to divert the man from doing something. But great action, action that is really great, cannot take place if the man hasn't it in his brain to think great thoughts, to dream great dreams. As has been so well pointed out to-day, the marvelous rise of Germany in the world of industry or of commerce, no less than

mind, that he had high ideals and finally shaped these ideals by his practical way. I was immensely struck, as I think all of TALKS TO STUDENTS AT CLARK us raust have been struck, by the way in which, a few weeks ago, our fellow citizens of German birth or descent (many of whom are here in this audience) took part in the service of commemorating the life and writings of Schiller. "Each race that comes here, each element, can contribute something of value and can contribute very much of value; and it would be a very good thing for all of our people if we should personally shape our development so that it would come as natural to us as it does to the people of Germany to recognize the incalculable debt of a nation to a writer like Schiller, to a man rily in conformity with the principle of duty. for the nation, for all mankind, upon which no price can be put. "From Germany this country has learned much. Germany has contributed a great element to the blood of our people, and it has given the most marked trend ever given to us along scholastic and university lines, to the whole system of training students and scholars. In taking what we should from Germany, from this great kindred nation, I wish that we could take specially the idealism which renders it natural to them to celebrate such an event as Schiller's life and writings; and also the keen, practical common sense which enables them to turn their idealistic spirit into an instrument for producing the most perfect military and industrial organizations that the world has ever seen.

PEACE SHOULD PREVAIL. "I hope most earnestly for the day when we shall see peace prevail among the nations of mankind; peace industrial, as well as military, prevail within the nations themselves. No man in public position can, under penalty of having forfeited the right to the respect of those whose regard he most values, fail as the opportunity comes to do all that in him lies for peace.

"But peace of a valuable type comes not to the man who craves it because he is afraid, but to the man who demands it because it is right. The peace granted contemptuously to the weakling and the coward is but a poor boon after it has been granted. "We must keep our minds upon the essentials and not upon the non-essentials. "Expected to pass through New London In 1861 there were people who cried peace, peace, who said that any peace, no matter how shameful, was preferable to the worst of all wars, a fratricidal war, and if those people had had their way we should have been hanging our heads now. We would now be feeling that the country founded by Washington, the country that at that time was perpetuated by Lincoln, had gone down in the wreck of irretrievable disaster.

"We got peace then, peace forever, as I believe, in this country because there were a sufficient number of men who felt as President Wright felt and went to the war to fight for permanent peace. I have no patience The President arrived at Putnam at 8:25 | with the brawler, the quarreler, the swashbuckler, and I have a little less for the academic person, either of body or soul, who believes that a nation any more than an individual can afford to put peace before When the train reached Worcester Lieut. justice. "In America we have been given as a people exceptional advantages. We are to be held to an exceptional accountability for the use we make of those advantages. We are not to be excused if we fail to do our duty abroad and at home want to see this nation not only strong but just, and not only just but strong. want to see us develop as a nation those qualities which we prize in the individual man. We want to see the individual American a decent man, but nothing but a decent man. I want to see him able to hold his own, I want to see that he does wrong to no one else, and does not suffer wrong himself.

"It is the same way with this nation. The constant effort of our people should be to see that we do not wrong any other people, that we are prompt to stretch the helping hand of friendship to any other Power which we are able to befriend, yet that we make it evident that this attitude springs not from weakness but from the junction of strength with a sense of justice.

"Among our own people what I most desire to see is the union of a lofty sense of the rights of others with the power to act efficiently and effectively. I do not wish to see in politics two entirely separate groups, one composed of the men who mean well and can do anything, and the other of the men who are thoroughly efficient, but do not mean well at ali. Policeman Sieman of the West 100th street station said that he caught a young man who was running along Amsterdam avenue early yesterday morning and asked him what was the matter. The young man said he was going into a house with Miss Edith Jackson of 830 Amsterdam avenue and that a man who said he was a detective ran up to them as they were entering the vestibule and told Miss Jackson she was under arrest.

The girl wanted to know what for. The man told her, she says, that she had better come quietly or he would whistle and call a patrol wagon. She says he asked her if she had a key to the house, and when she was putting it into the lock her escort ran. At this point the policeman heard screams and took the young man back to the house. They found Clark just coming out. Miss Jackson said that when she opened the door Clark tried to push in. Then she screamed. Policeman Sieman caught Clark by the collar and asked him if he were a detective. "Detective, nothing," said Clark. Miss Jackson's escort stepped up to Clark and threw back Clark's coat. ## WHOLE VAN LOAD OF RAIDERS

POUNCED ON THE GOOD LOOKOUT BEFORE HE COULD HOLLER.

Seven Intrenehed Men Tore Up Racing Sheets, Cops Say, Before They Could Be Pinched—250 Names and Megaphone Part of Inspector Hogan's Spotls.

A covered moving van backed up in front of 54 East Tenth street late yesterday afternoon.

"All right!" shouted the driver. The doors of the van burst open, and out jumped four detectives and a posse of ordinary cops. They jumped on a quiet man who was oafing on the sidewalk and hustled him into the van before he could give an alarm, and then they proceeded to raid an alleged poolroom on the third floor of the building. The detectives were Manchester, Berbenice, Devlin and Boyle of Inspector Hogan's staff. They have had the place under surveillance for some time. Two weeks ago, they say, one C. Johnson secured an injunction in a Brooklyn court restrain-ing Commissioner McAdoo and the police from interfering with his business. Since then, Manchester says, he has managed to get into the place and make several bets. On his evidence Magistrate Wahle, sitting in the Centre street police court, issued five warrants yesterday, on the strength of which the raid was made. The detectives knew that the guard was a good one. That was the reason they hired the man.

At the head of the stairs on the third floor, according to the police, there was a fruit stand behind which it was necessary to pass to get into the alleged poolroom. When the police got by it they found a man who said he was Benediot Kane of 52½ Seventh street seated at a table in the center of the room. They say he was paying off bets.

There were in the room about 250 men, and behind a partition at the rear seven more were found. Before they could be reached, these latter, the police say, tore up racing cards and sheets and threw the pieces out of the window.

Twelve prisoners were taken. The warrants were served on Kane, Frank Maynard of 116 University place, William Stone of 103 East 132d street, Andrew Hayes of 649 East Ninth street and John Hennessey of 450 West Fifty-eighth street. They were charged with keeping and maintaining a poolroom. The seven men found behind the partition were charged with aiding and abetting. The prisoners were locked up in the Mercer street station.

The rest of the men found in the room were allowed to go after their names had

John Kiernan, a laborer, was killed yes terday afternoon at 101st street and Third avenue by a southbound Third avenue trolley car. Chen Yen, a laundryman, of 8 Bowery, was arrested as the indirect cause of Kiernan's death. Chen was remanded for an investigation by the Coroner.

Chen was coming downtown with a big basket of wash. He put it between the two front seats of the car, and the end of the basket protruded some distance at the side. Kiernan was at work in the street near the tracks and when the car approached he stepped back, but not far enough. The basket struck him and knocked him down upon the other track. A northbound car was near and the motorman could not stop quickly enough to avoid striking Kiernan. His skull was fractured and he died on the way to the Harlem Hospital.

HUSBAND SHOT IN STRUGGLE. Woman Says That She Was Fighting For Her Life When the Pistol Went Off.

Mrs. Nellie Crane, aged 39 years, was arraigned yesterday in the Gates avenue police court, Brooklyn, charged with shooting her husband, Edward M. Crane, who is twelve years her junior. He was on the verge of death last evening in the Bradford street hospital with a bullet wound in the head behind the right ear. For the last week they had lived in a furnished room on the second floor front of the home of Mrs. Mary Ferris, at 16 Williams avenue, East New York, and here the shooting occurred early yesterday morning.

Mrs. Crane pleaded not guilty to the charge of felonious assault and was held by Magistrate Higginbotham without bail to await the result of her husband's injury. She told the police that the shooting oc-

HE DISABLED RAILROAD SIGNALS. Wire Thief Strips a New York Central

Cut-Arrested for Felony. On Thursday last John Ward, who lives at the Empire Lodging House in East 123d street, stole 2,300 feet of electric wire out of the New York Central cut between Tremont and Claremont Park. The wire was used to set the automatic signals from 168th street and 183d street. Ward was found at daylight with the wire in his possession. He would not tell where he had got it. The police thought t was telephone wire, and they notified the telephone company. The telephone company said it had not lost any wire, and on Saturday Ward was discharged. It was not until last night that the police earned what damage Ward might have done by stealing the wire. Then Hiram C. Williams, superintendent of signals of the New York Central road, told the police that it was only by a very small margin that an incoming express train had missed smashing into another express the morn-ing after Ward stole the wire. If it had not been daylight, there surely would have been a collision. The loss of the wire put the automatic signals between Tremont and Claremont stations out of business and tied up the suburban express trains for three hours. Yesterday Ward was arrested again, this time for felony.

Trend of British Invention. From the London Express. From the London Express.

The classification of sealed patents at the Patent Office rendered necessary by the act which came into operation Jan. I last has shown that the inventiveness of the human mind can be classified in 148 sections.

Cooking, it appears, has brought forth in forty-eight years 3.575 patented inventions, an average of 73 every year. Umbrellas have been the subject of 1,457 inventions, or an average of 30 per annum. Hatarunumbrellas very close, with 1,411 specifications since 1855.

very close, with 1,411 specifications since 1855.

Invention runs in periodic grooves. Thus 1896 and 1897 reflected the enormous development in bicycles. Now the motor vehicle industry is engaging many ingenious minds. So marked is the development of this industry that the total number of British inventions in this department has doubled since 1900.

For half a century the uppermost problem, as indicated by the trend of invention, has been that of locomotion.

That inventiveness is on the increase is evidenced by the fact that last year 15,089 patents were sealed. Ten years ago the number was less than 12,000, and in 1884 the total reached only 3,721.

Identifying Col. Jackson.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE SUN—Sir: In a let'er to THE SUN "M.P.R." asked which of the two Col. Jacksons, Henry or Michael, was a member of the court-martial that tried Benedict Arnold in 1779. This question was asked by O. W. Shaw of Austin. Minn.. Nov. 29, 1883, and may be found in the Magazine of American History, volume XI... The answer given by "Mistory" in Magazine. page 263. The answer given by "Minto," in March 1881. on page 361 of the same volume, is as follows:
"Henry Jackson commanded the famous Boston regiment that entered Philadelphia the day after the British evacuated that city. He also served on the court martial that tried Arnold in 1779, taking the place of Col. Hazen as a member of the board. The brave Col. Michael Jackson of Newton, Mass York, in September, 1778. In January, 1777, he was commissioned Colonel of the Eighth Continental Regiment, but on account of disability from his wound the regiment was led by Lieut.-Col. John

In a letter from Washington to the President Congress, dated Valley Forge, June 18, 1778, he reports having appointed Gen. Arnold to com-mand in Philadelphia, as the state of his wound would not permit his services in a more active line, and "that Col. [Henry] Jackson, with a detachment of troops, is to attend him. And I flatter mysel WILLIAM W. SCOTT.

CLOUDBURST FLOODS A MINE.

Fifty-six Miners Are Imprisoned, but All

Are Finally Rescued.

UTICA, June 21 .- A cloudburst descended on the village of Clinton to-day and the resulting flood imprisoned fifty-six miners who were at work in the Franklin iron mines over a quarter of a mile from the exit. Some of the men waded out, some swam out and a number of the men escaped by an airshaft. There are always small streams of water running through the bottom of the Franklin mines, and at times the volume of water increases when there is a downpour of rain on the surface. Shortly after noon to-day a cloudburst struck the village and within ten minutes the streams in the mines began to rise at a tremendous rate. The miners dropped their picks and shovels and made for the exit of the shaft. Before they had covered 200 feet the water had risen to the armpits of the fifty-six men and a desperate situation confronted them.

About half the miners were able to swim, and divesting themselves of such clothing as it was possible for them to remove, they paddled toward the exit. Their less fortunate fellows, who were unable to swim or reach the airshaft, caught hold of protruding ledges of rock and hung on for dear life, while half a dozen grabbed hold of mules swimming toward the mine opening and so reached safety. The alarm was sounded by those who managed to gain the exit to the shaft and those still in the workings were soon rescued. Not a life was lost. The damage to the mines and throughout the village of

SLIPPED OFF THE FERRY BOAT.

Man of Seventy Says He Spent an Hour to the North River-Found in Midstream. John Ford, 70 years old, a retired saloonkeeper of 298 East Twenty-first street. was fished out of the North River late las night after spending an unpleasant hour in the water. According to Ford's own story, le boarded the ferryboat Easton of the Nev Jersey Central line, mistaking it for a Staten Island boat, and slipped off. The force-boat Bound Brook of the same line, due at the foot of Liberty street at 11:18, picked Ford up in midstream.

When the Bound Brook landed, an amiliance was called. Before it arrived ford had sent for a flask of whisky, saying he might as well be wet inside as outside. He was removed to the Hudson street hospital, where he will spend the night.
